

HUSKIES WHO STUTTER

Community is Here!

The purpose of this bi-weekly, on-campus meet-up is for UW students, faculty, and recent alumni to discuss stuttering with people who "get it": other Huskies who stutter! Conversation centers around our experiences with stuttering in academic, professional, and social settings, with topics including class participation, professional self-advocacy, and self-disclosure. We also like to laugh about shared experiences and tangents unrelated to stuttering.

While it's our speech that brings us together, we strongly value what makes us unique. Group members include Huskies with various academic interests and levels of education who come from many different countries and cultural backgrounds. Like people who stutter themselves, this group is thoughtful, diverse, and has interesting things to say.

If we haven't convinced you yet, research has shown that being in community with other people who stutter helps increase self-confidence, self-efficacy, and communication satisfaction. We really hope to hear from you!

Contact UW graduate student clinician and person who stutters David Sanchez to learn more about meeting times, campus location, and the Facebook group.

Email him at dms568@uw.edu